Excerpt from Contributions to the Early History of Bryan McDonald and Family: Settlers in 1689, on Red Clay Creek, Mill Creek Hundred (or Township) Newcastle County, Delaware; Together With a Few Biographical Sketches and Other Statistics of General Interest to Their Lineal Descendants Dear Relatives and Friends: I forward to your address this day a copy of my latest labors on our family history. As you will perceive, they are composed of two main divisions: one furnishing information concerning the early life of our ancestors in America, and the other giving the beginning of a series of biographies. These latter stop somewhat abruptly in the middle of the life of Colonel James McDonald, oldest son of Major Richard McDonald, and my grandfather. We have not carried them any farther for the present, as we concluded to wait for more complete details from you and other relatives in order to make the histories as accurate as could be expected for a first attempt. I invite your criticism and correction of these few sketches, and your contributions of whatever else you may deem advisable to send me. From these rough samples, you can form some idea of what we desire. In case you are disposed to prepare elaborate biographies of yourselves or family, and intend to print them yourselves. I would suggest that you preserve as nearly as possible the form and style of these present contributions, so that all our efforts may be uniform.
