Dept. of Commerce, Technology Administration, National Institute of Standards and Technology, 2001 LC Number: QC100 . U57 no. 960-3 OCLC Number: (OCoLC)604984733 Subject: Dispersion -- Terminology. Excerpt: . . . to the average equivalent spherical volume (V) given by the BET gas BET adsorption method, such that: $3 V DSSA50 50 AANV 6 BET$ where V is the equivalent spherical volume calculated from the median $50 2$ diameter, D in m, SSA is the specific surface area in m^2/g and is the $50 3$ particle density in g/cm^3 . equivalent spherical diameter The diameter of a sedimenting particle determined from Stokes law and assuming a spherical shape. The term is sometimes used in conjunction with other measurement techniques and theoretical constructs, where spherical geometry is assumed. fractal A structure that has an irregular geometry under all scales of observation (i. e. , it is non-Euclidian). The fractal dimension of a species, D , is the exponent to f which a characteristic length scale must be raised to obtain proportionality with the overall size of the species. Destabilized suspensions tend to form aggregates with fractal structures. In this case, D has a value lying between $1/f$ and 3 , where $D = 3$ is a fully dense object. f minimum particle size (MPS) An experimental quantity operationally defined as the minimum particle size that can be achieved by a particular dispersion process as determined by an appropriate measurement technique. The characteristic dimension used in determining the MPS should be clearly noted (e. g. , mean size, median size, modal size, etc.). ultimate working unit An individual particle or group of particles that retains its structure...
