Not illustrated. 1906 Excerpt: .but they were exceedingly superstitious about this spot. Then, why or how they could have been induced to go there in the night and build this hut, was something hard to explain. No one of the negroes was ever known to do otherwise than to deny that they ever had anything to do with it. Another theory wa3 that some white men built this hut for Mary, and had done it for the purpose of keeping the negroes in awe of her, for they believed she could Hoodoo them, and could tell any secret in the world, if she desired to do so. If anything was stolen or lost in the community, or any mysterious thing happened, Mary could tell all about it, provided she desired to do so. It was, therefore, supposed by some that white people had built this cabin for Witch Mary. But, conjectures aside, one thing was certain; Mary had the cabin, and no one ever knew by whom or when it was built. The white people said the negroes built it, the negroes said the Indians had come back and built it and stole away in the night. Old Mary said, De angels flew down from de skies while I was asleep on de ground, an wen I wake up de cabin wuz standin over me. This was all she would ever tell. So this mysterious hut, built on this enchanted spot, for this weird, eccentric, and queer little, old black...
