Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Guide to the Catharine Page Perkins Collection of Greek and Roman Coins The Catharine Page Perkins collection of Greek and Roman coins represents a portion of the purchases which have been made for the Classical Department of the Museum with the munificent bequest of the lady in whose memory it is named. It consists of 609 specimens, which were acquired in three lots, in 1895, 1897, and 1900 respectively. The formation of each of these lots was the work of several years on the part of a devoted friend of the Museum, who has had unusual opportunities for securing choice examples, and who has constantly kept before himself the highest standard of excellence as the test for the acceptance of each coin that was to come into our collection. As a result the collection, though small, is of remarkably high quality, for both the beauty and the brilliant preservation of its individual specimens, some of which are exceedingly rare, and a few are probably unique. As evidence of the estimation in which certain of them...
